FirstBase & Rampa Ventures launch Quest for the C-Corp to incorporate 3 Latinamerican startups in USA for free

Entering the US market is a necessary step for many technology companies in Latin America. FirstBase and Rampa Ventures have partnered to support Latam entrepreneurs in making this step.

FirstBase has made it easier than ever for global startup founders to open a company and bank account in the US. FirstBase is the all-in-one package to form a US presence and grow the business internationally.

With its virtual accelerator, HiperPropulsor, Rampa supports Latinamerican startups that seek to expand and grow internationally – no matter where they are based.

FirstBase and Rampa firmly believe that geography shouldn't be a limitation for startups success, which is why both call for the best early-stage startups located in Latin America interested in incorporating their startup in the USA to its Quest for the C-Corp contest, in which 3 Latinamerican startups will be able to incorporate their startup as a C-Corporation in Delaware, for free.

Applications will be open on December 20, 2019, and those interested must complete an online form. Mark Milastsivy, CEO and founder of FirstBase; Mak Gutiérrez, CEO and founder of Rampa; and Alexa Clark, Startup Analyst and founder of Rampa, will be in charge of selecting the 3 winners.

Some of the participation criteria are: Startups located in Latin America, qualified team, scalable business model and a commercially attractive market.

In addition to the free incorporation, the package for the winners will include a US bank account, tax identification, tax consultation, legal documents, support, access to secret offers from partners and introductions to US venture capital funds.
